Today we did many things at the Staten Island Children's Museum!

At the museum we checked out three very cool exhibits one was all about explorations where we got to explore a rainforest canopy and cave, drive a dogsled in the tundra or dive to the ocean floor, build an igloo, cross a river, walk in snow shoes and learnt many more things about extreme environments.

We also got to see the House About It exhibit where it was all about the homes people go to, how they are built and all about the people who build them, so we were able to go to the frame house and use a wrecking ball, drills and digger, then we were able to design and decorate and learn all about all the different trades.

Our last exhibit was so much fun we got to pretend we were firefighters, ringing the bells, sliding down the fire gear, manipulate the gauges, hook up the hose and jump on and off the fire truck.

After all that, we were nice and hungry for lunch so we ate lunch in the museum. Then we loaded the buses and got to camp just in time to get ready to go home and rest up after our full and exciting day at camp!
